ABSTRACT

A method and system for performing many different types if algorithms utilizes a single mathematical engine such that the mathematical engine is capable of utilizing the same multipliers for all of the algorithms. The mathematical engine includes a selectively controlled parallel output register, at least one selectively controlled memory, and a plurality of processing elements. The output register, the memory and the processing elements are selectively controlled depending upon the algorithm to be performed.